Parsha Summary

Pinchas

Numbers 25:10-30:1

God bestows on Pinchas an eternal covenant of peace as a reward for his zeal on God's behalf. The Israelite who was killed, Zimri, was the son of a chieftain from the tribe of Shimon. The woman was Cozbi, the daughter of a chieftain of the Midianites. God commands Moses and the Israelites to attack the Midianites because of their role in luring the Israelites to idolatrous worship and apostasy.

The parashah continues with the rise of a new generation and preparation for the conquest of Eretz Yisrael. This new generation, unlike the generation of the Exodus, is characterized by fidelity to God and Torah.

At the end of the plague, God mandates another census of men who are over 20 years of age. Unlike the earlier census, this one is by tribal clans, and the total number is over 600,000 males of fighting age. Once the number of people is established, God discusses allocating the Promised Land by lot and by the size of each tribe.

The census confirms that the generation of the Exodus has died, fulfilling God's dictate that those rebellious Jews would die in the wilderness and their children would reach the land of Israel. The daughters of Zelophedad raise an issue with the justice of the inheritance system. Why, they ask, should their father's land allotment go outside the family just because he had no sons? Moses consults with God, who affirms the wisdom of the daughters and grants them the right to inherit. God tells Moses to ascend to the heights of Mount Avarim to view the land the Israelites will enter, after which he, too, shall die. Still concerned for the well-being of the people, Moses asks God to appoint someone to lead in his stead, so that the Lord's community may not be like sheep that have no shepherd. God appoints Joshua, and Moses signifies the choice in a public ceremony involving Eleazar, the Kohen Gadol (high priest).

Once the appointment of the land and the succession of leadership is resolved, God establishes the calendar of public sacrifices, the festivals and holy days of ancient Israel and contemporary Judaism. These occasions of public festivity mark the daily offering, Shabbat (Sabbath), Rosh Hodesh (the New Moon), Pesach (Passover), Shavuot (the Feast of Weeks), Rosh Ha-Shanah (the New Year), Yom Kippur (the Day of Atonement), Sukkot (the Feast of Tabernacles), and Shemini Atzeret (the Gathering of the Eighth Day).

From Biblical to Medieval to Modern Times, married women within the Jewish tradition have covered their hair in various ways. How much of the tradition reflects Jewish Law, Halakha, how much is influenced by the particular cultural norms of the Jewish community and how much of each woman's experience make up the continued yet diverse adherence to this practice?

THE JERUSALEM CYCLE: THE ETERNAL RISE, FALL AND EXILE OF THE CITY THURSDAY, JULY 30 • 1PM

Our virtual Tour continues with Josh Hartuv and Rabbi David Russo. The story of Jerusalem is that of a city of glorious periods of prominence and fame combined with infamous violent destructions. From King David to Rome, this tour will look at the waves of this pattern over the city's first millennium.

Using the commemoration of Tisha B'Av as our lens, we will also look at the impact of exile on all of these destructions: what were their coping mechanisms, where did they go, and how did they remain proud of their identity?
